

Food lovers in Cardiff can now enjoy a mouth-watering array of Indian cuisine following the launch of the Mango House Dining Club on Westgate Street.

The new restaurant – which has enjoyed an outstanding reception since its opening last month – is situated in the former Grand Hotel, one of Cardiff's landmark venues in the heart of the city centre. The interior has been elegantly furnished to create a contemporary, intimate atmosphere, whilst still retaining many of the original features of the historic building.

Owned and managed by the Hussain family, The Mango House offers a fantastic selection of recipes created from the flavours and spices of the subcontinent. Classic Indian dishes are complimented by original specialities such as the Bual Maach Aloo – a Bangladeshi fish prepared with coconut milk, lime and fresh coriander – and the Lamb Phall, which combines chillies, ginger and lemon juice to enable diners to experience a truly unique taste of authentic Indian cuisine.

Having been involved in the restaurant trade for a number of years, owner Jang Hussain has achieved a fantastic reputation within the local industry. The established Mango House restaurant in Magor – which recently celebrated its 10th anniversary – is renowned throughout south-east Wales for its exquisite food and exemplary service. The success of this restaurant has enabled Jang and his family to invest in a venue in the centre of Cardiff.

As Jang explains: 'We are delighted to have been able to open our new Mango House restaurant in such an excellent location on Westgate Street. We identified a niche in the market for a high quality Indian restaurant in central Cardiff and look forward to becoming one of the preferred places for people to dine in the capital.'

To celebrate the launch of the restaurant, the Mango House will be participating in Cardiff's annual Indian Food Festival later this year. The festival – which runs throughout March – will include cookery demonstrations, special events, film screenings and of course fantastic Indian cuisine. The Mango House is the only restaurant in the city centre taking part in the event and will be offering curry lovers a discount of 20% off all food purchases.
