

Mango House Indian Restaurant

Volunteer Information Pack

Mission Statement

The Mango House Magor & Cardiff both restaurants will offer a complete unique dining experience, not to mention an excellent choice of food, an eclectic selection of beverages and a personal, sincere service that's second to none.

In addition the Mango House will be promoting volunteering and very much committed to supporting individual development and learning.

The Mango House recognises the important role local businesses have to play in the local communities and surroundings to ensure financial prosperity for all. Hence the Mango House has amalgamated business and community ethics cohesively to provide an environment of learning and development for individuals for as long as they desire.

The Mango House unlike any other Indian Restaurant is run in partnership between two committed partners who sincerely dedicated to a community regeneration approach rather than individual gain.

One of the owners is a graduate from the University of Greenwich in Youth & Community Studies and has a number of additional qualification short and long term courses in his portfolio in the field of community regeneration. Furthermore, despite the academics he has 14 years of hands on community work for the voluntary sector and the local government in Westminster, Camden, Bridgend and Newport.

“Coming from a disadvantage environment in inner-city London it was extremely difficult to get a job and the way forward for me was to volunteer my services for a voluntary organisation for over a year. Whilst working with the organisation I developed key skills, passion and a belief that it was paramount if a society was to prosper it required a strong bond between local individuals, businesses and other services. It is vital that all partnership between the community and local businesses and public services is formed on a shared objective to reduce social deprivation and increase the quality of life in the area. In addition every organisation should be able to commit themselves to creating new opportunities for volunteering and learning”.

Volunteer Application Form

This form should be used by anyone wishing to volunteer for the Mango House Indian Restaurant.

The Mango House aims to work with local residents and volunteers to help develop individuals lacking key skills in catering and hospitality industry to fulfil similar paid positions in other organisations and companies to make them more economically active.
